Pass All, the much talked about Denver trotting stallion, lives up to his name by winning his maiden effort on a mile The contest in which he won track. was the opening gun of the mile track racing season, and it occurred over Overland Park track in Denver on June 9. There was nothing remarkable in his defeat of a good though not high class field, and he fulfilled the expectations of his admirers when he trotted the first heat in 2:1214 and came back in the third in 2:12% on a notoriously slow track-slower by four seconds than the general Eastern race course.

Especial significance is attached to the performance because it marks winning form on the part of a trotter for which a great deal has been predicted this year. Not since Marvin crossed the Mississippi with Palo Alto in 1890 has there been more talk about a stallion than has taken place during the last six months over Pass All. Late last fall he trotted a trial in 2.06 4, and almost unbelievable as it was, a glance at his racing career showed that it was quite possible for him to have done so. Four weeks ago interest was renewed when the stallion negotiated a quarter in 28% seconds-a 1:55 clip. month of May, and only two, Uhlan and Lou Dillon, ever at any time.
